

CONECUH COUNTY GOVERNMENT CENTER
evergreen, alabama

Conecuh County decided to replace its old county courthouse in 2005 at an estimated cost of $6.5 million. This was a significant savings as estimates to repair the old courthouse ran in the neighborhood of $10 million. For less money, the citizens of Conecuh County got a much larger, and more modern building at a much smaller price tag. Stromberg Architectural Products was part of the cost-saving process. The new government center opened in May 2007.

Stromberg fabricated columns, cornice, and an architrave for the new government center. Cast in Stromberg Glass Fiber Reinforced Polymer (GFRP), these architectural elements will last much longer than materials used when the older Conecuh County courthouse was built.
